

TEST ADVANTAGE'S STREETWISE™ TECHNOLOGY SELECTED BY TOYOTA MOTOR CORPORATION TO SUPPORT ZERO DEFECTS PROGRAM

Manufacturing Excellence, Device Reliability and Customer Satisfaction Drive Decision

TEMPE, AZ— March 20, 2007—Test Advantage Inc. announced today that Toyota Motor Corporation has purchased Streetwise™, a unique software platform that provides a suite of tools for decreasing semiconductor manufacturers' Defective Parts Per Million (DPPM) rates, thereby enhancing overall device quality and reliability.

Zero defect programs have become a norm in the auto industry where quality and yield are critical to the safety and reliability of a company's products, and its bottom line. Test Advantage has been at the forefront of software solutions to reduce DPPM in semiconductor manufacturing. The Test Advantage Software Division is driven by the desire to help its customers attain ZERO defects in production.

"Toyota's selection of Streetwise is a testament to the continued success of the technology and its ability to help achieve DPPM improvement and overall device reliability without compromising manufacturing cost effectiveness," commented Fabrice Dechoux, CEO of Test Advantage.

"Streetwise is a unique, production-proven platform that enhances any device manufacturer's competitive advantage."
